

Supporting Children and Families Experiencing Homelessness:
CCDF State Self-Assessment

Carie Bires, Carmen Garcia, Julia Zhu, Rose Gallagher

About this self-assessment tool

This self-assessment tool identifies key policies and practices that may improve inclusivity of homeless children in early care and education settings. State advocates or administrators can use the tool to identify policies and practices that are already in place, as well as those they could consider implementing or enhancing. Most states will not be able to implement every best practice and model policy included in this tool; however, using the self-assessment can provide states and advocates with a better understanding of what those best practices and model policies are so they can better identify those that are most feasible to implement. Although the tool was primarily created to support states in leveraging the Child Care and Development Fund (CCDF) State Plan to improve access to child care for homeless families, the policies and practices laid out could be applied to virtually any early care and education program.

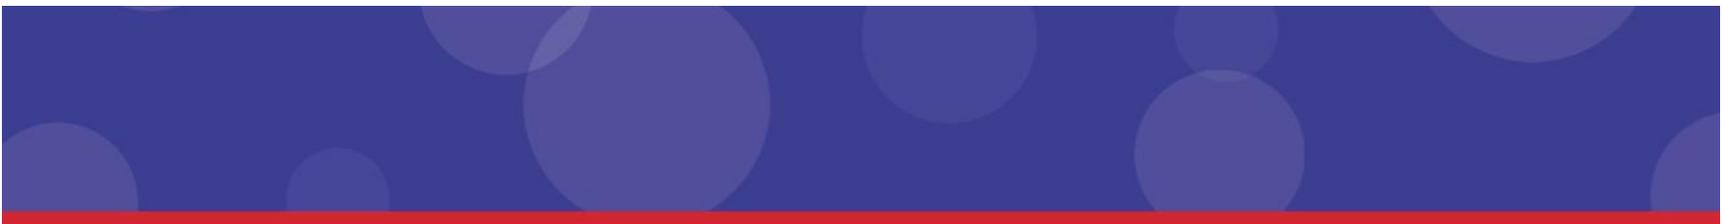

The tool is organized into six sections, which are described below. Each section addresses one critical component necessary to ensure high-quality child care is accessible to children and families who experience homelessness. With the exception of the requirements checklist, each section includes recommended items and where that item can be addressed in the CCDF preprint, a space to describe the state's current status on the item, and space to record notes or a brief action plan for addressing the item.

- Requirements checklist: This section provides an at-a-glance look at the requirements related to homelessness in the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 2014 (the CCDBG Act); it includes a description of the requirement and corresponding references to where the requirement can be found in the CCDBG Act and the CCDF draft preprint released on September 14, 2015. States can use this checklist to ensure that they are in compliance with the new law.
- Policy and administration: This section focuses specifically on the administrative level of the child care program and identifies CCDF policies that promote access to high-quality early care and education for children who experience homelessness.
- Family support: Families who experience homelessness face unique barriers to services. This section identifies key supports that facilitate participation in early care and education programs for families who experience homelessness.

- Professional support: Working effectively with families who experience homelessness requires a well-prepared workforce that understands the unique needs of this population, has knowledge of best practices for delivering services, and has adequate support for managing its own self-care. This section identifies the crucial training and support needs for the field.
- Collaborations: Families who experience homelessness often have very complex needs that cannot be met by any one service system. Collaboration is required to ensure families can access the services they need and can be successful in early care and education programs. This section identifies recommended collaborations that support the goal of serving more homeless families in high-quality early childhood programs.
- Accountability: The CCDBG Act requires data collection on the number of homeless families served by the CCDF, which presents new opportunities to ensure early care and education programs are accountable for serving this population. This section identifies some additional metrics that can support states in understanding if the policies, procedures and practices they have in place are effective in reaching homeless families.
